Accubuilt, Inc. Participates in
World's Largest Funeral Service Convention and Expo

Lima, OH – Accubuilt, Inc. will be participating in the National Funeral Directors Association's (NFDA) 127th annual convention October 12-15 in Orlando, Florida.

Accubuilt, Inc., the world's oldest and largest manufacturer of Specialty Vehicles, will have a number of vehicles on display, including their recently-introduced Superior Premier funeral coach. Boasting a patented, industry-exclusive 45-inch-wide rear casket floor, the modern, sleek exterior of the Premier is a "must-see" for show attendees.

The NFDA International Convention & Expo is expected to draw nearly 6,000 funeral directors, mortuary science students, exhibitors, and other allied professionals. The annual NFDA Convention & Expo features the world's largest offering of workshops, seminars, networking events, and exhibits to help funeral directors develop strategies for success in an ever-changing marketplace.

"NFDA's Expo is the biggest in the world, bringing the best and most innovative products and services in the business together in one place," said NFDA CEO Christine Pepper, CAE. "Every year, funeral directors look forward to hitting the show floor and discovering the tools and resources they can put to work in their funeral homes to better serve their families, and this year's Expo promises to be better than ever."

Up-to-the-minute information on the 2008 NFDA International Convention & Expo can be found at www.nfdaparadise08.com.

NFDA is the world's leading funeral service association, serving 19,500 individual members who represent more than 10,000 funeral homes in the United States and internationally. From its headquarters in Brookfield, Wisconsin, and its Advocacy office in Washington, D.C., NFDA informs, educates and advocates to help members enhance the quality of service they provide to families.
